Racial Justice Sunday

Racial Justice Sunday enables Christians across Britain and Ireland to focus on the issue of ending racism and racial inequality. Today, we are been invited to mark the day by mobilising together in prayer, work and action to raise awareness of the 50th anniversary of the “I have a dream” speech by Martin Luther King and to ask 50 years on, where are we now ? The speech spoke about all God’s people living in freedom and peace in a world governed by truth and justice. It called for liberty, equality and justice for all people, regardless of their racial heritage. Dr King’s dream centred on a “Beloved Community”, a society built on justice, equality and freedom for all God’s people which was rooted in scripture, particularly in Revelations 7:9-10. The speech remains an inspirational call for us to work for a fairer and more equitable world now. The face of racism looks different today from how it looked in the past. Overt racism is easily condemned, but the sin of racism is often with us in more subtle forms. As Christians we are called to act to build justice and peace around racial equality and identity issues. We are called to welcome the stranger and to be hospitable to those who are different. As the problem of racism and racial inequality continue, there is an on-going moral need for us to work for anti-racism and racial equality now. Racism in all its forms contradicts Catholic Social Teaching, which calls for respect for the human dignity of every person. The creation of human beings by God “in God’s own image” confers upon every human person a distinct dignity and it also provides the basis for the fundamental equality of all human beings. For the Church, this equality, which is rooted in being, acquires the dimension of an altogether special brotherhood and sisterhood though the Incarnation of Jesus. Every form of discrimination against individuals and groups, whether because of race, ethnicity, religion, gender, economic status, national or cultural origin is a serious injustice which severely weakens the social fabric, and deprives a country of the unique contribution of many of its citizens. Racism will continue until we challenge it. Patterns of racism can be in our hearts but are also in our national institutions and world systems that produce racial inequality. To address racism it needs an internal transformation including forgiveness and conversion as we open our hearts and minds but also external transformation in our institutions, both public and private and their policies, procedures, operations and culture.
